Closing arguments set in Boston Marathon bombing trial

(AP) Boston-With one last chance to connect with the jury, lawyers for Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev are expected to continue to portray him as an aimless college student who fell under the domineering influence of his radicalized older brother. But prosecutors are sure to remind the jury of the brutality of the attack, the people who were maimed or killed, and the image of Tsarnaev standing behind 8-year-old Martin Richard and his family about a minute before the blasts. The boy was one of three people killed when Tsarnaev and his brother, Tamerlan, placed two pressure-cooker bombs near the marathon finish line on April 15, 2013. Closing arguments in the first phase of the trial are scheduled for Monday.

Significant Events – International

Palestinian Authority rejects Israel tax transfer

(BBC) Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas says he has refused to accept hundreds of millions of dollars of tax revenues unfrozen by Israel. Mr. Abbas says he returned the money because Israel deducted a third to pay for what it called utility bills. He has threatened to take Israel to the International Criminal Court (ICC) unless the full amount is released. Israel collects taxes on behalf of the Palestinian Authority (PA), but halted payments in January. It had frozen transfers in protest at the Palestinians joining the ICC. Palestinian membership began on 1 April, giving them the option to pursue Israel for alleged war crimes. Israel says it has deducted the cost of services provided to the Palestinian population, including electricity, water and hospital bills. The government made the decision to restart payments two weeks ago but warned at the time that it would make deductions from the transfer.

Yemen conflict: Red Cross to send aid flights to Sanaa

(BBC) The International Committee of the Red Cross is due to make two emergency aid flights into Yemen's capital, Sanaa. The ICRC has been given permission to land planes carrying staff and medical supplies in Yemen, which it says is facing a humanitarian emergency. Saudi-led airstrikes targeting Houthi rebels have hit the country for 12 nights. Fighting has intensified in the southern port of Aden, as government troops battle the Houthis. The UN says more than 500 people have been killed over the past two weeks in Yemen. The ICRC says it will send a cargo plane carrying vital medical supplies, and a small passenger plane of aid workers. However, it is still awaiting approval to send a surgical team by boat to Aden.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

An upper level trough continues to bring rain and mountain snow to the area this evening. Tonight there will be a brief break before additional rain and snow showers continue Monday and Tuesday.

Medford Weather:

Winds will increase during the day today in the Shasta Valley. The most impactful snow showers will be across Siskiyou County in California beginning on this evening and lasting through Tuesday morning. This will create treacherous roads in the Mount Shasta area.

Reno Weather:

Slick roads likely for the Sierra early this morning. A brief break in precipitation today with breezy and cool conditions forecast. The next storm moves in Tuesday and Tuesday night with rain, snow and well below normal temperatures. A warming and drying trend is expected late in the week.

San Francisco Weather:

The second wave of an approaching storm system will impact the area starting this evening and continuing into Tuesday night. This second wave will produce heavier and more widespread precipitation, along with locally gusty south winds. Thunderstorms will be possible Tuesday through Tuesday night with snow accumulation likely in the hills above 4000 feet. Dry weather will return by Wednesday.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

An unusually strong and cold storm system will begin to spread into the area later today and tonight. This storm will bring significant mountain snow tonight into Tuesday night down to 3500 feet. Thunderstorms with some hail possible in the Valley Tuesday. Showers will linger through Wednesday. Warmer and drier weather for the latter half of the week.

Hanford Weather:

A stronger system will arrive over the region on Tuesday and Wednesday with increased chances for precipitation. Dry and warmer weather returns for the latter part of the week.

Southern California:

Los Angeles Weather:

Onshore flow and a deepening trough of low pressure will bring an increase in clouds and a cooling trend through early this week. A frontal system will bring rain and mountain snow to the region on Tuesday and Tuesday night. Marginal warming is expected around mid-week through late week with normal high temperatures for this time of year.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A low pressure system will move slowly southward just off the west coast, moving inland through California Tuesday and Tuesday night. This will bring stronger onshore flow with cooling, more clouds along and west of the mountains, and gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts. There will also be chances for mainly light precipitation with the most likely time for precipitation Tuesday evening into Tuesday night with a cold frontal passage. Dry and a little warmer for Wednesday and Thursday under weak high pressure. Another low pressure system from the northwest could bring more cooling for late Friday into next weekend.

Southeast California Weather:

Low pressure that will be moving slowly eastward across the great basin and central Rockies, will bring cooler temperatures and locally gusty winds to the region through at least the middle part of this week. Temperatures will then rebound by the end of the week with highs rising back into the middle and upper 80's across the deserts, before the next low pressure center moving inland from the Pacific brings back cooler temperature and more unsettled weather to the region early next week.
